Nebraska Now: Jennifer Homan, Paintings
Current – April 5, 2015
Kearney artist Jeni Homan creates soft and insightful vistas of the Nebraska landscape using the pastel medium. The artist’s small- to large-scale paintings are documents of a quickly fleeting “non-interrupted” landscape that, over time, is continually altered by societal growth.

A World of Change
Current – April 19, 2015
This exhibition pays tribute to historical events that have profoundly impacted our world, nation, and state. Each piece captures the essence of these life-changing circumstances in a variety of media and styles. The artworks tell a compelling story of strength, perseverance, ingenuity, life, and death.

Picture This: Nebraska Poet Laureates – Ted Kooser
Current – April 19, 2015
The annual series of exhibitions in the Postmaster Gallery during 2015 features, Picture This: Nebraska Poet Laureates, that explores the purpose of poetry, creating a synthesis of the literary with the visual. Aesthetic delights and sensory speech that connect us with our soulful self and the experiences of others are stirringly evoked through the visual language of metaphor.

Formed, Folded, Pressed: Paper
Current – March 29, 2015
At its simplest, paper is an ordinary, everyday item that is a part of most of our lives. Yet when it is found in the hands of an artist and is purposefully manipulated in some fashion, it can become a complex, three-dimensional artwork that speaks of form, function, our culture, our land, and our lives.

Around Town: Grant Reynard’s Winter Scenes
Current – February 15, 2015
During the 1940s, Grant Reynard did a series of drawings titled Inside Manhattan for PM Daily, a New York newspaper. These winter scene selections capture another time and setting unlike those of familiar rural Nebraska.
The Art of MONA’s Founders: Zaruba, Peterson, Karraker
Current – March 1, 2015
Gary Zaruba, Larry Peterson, and Jack Karraker are not only founders of the Museum of Nebraska Art, they are also artists in their own right. All are retired art faculty members from the Art and Art History Department, University of Nebraska Kearney. Recognized for their deep and continuing involvement with MONA, the Museum is proud to showcase their artistic talents with a selection of their artworks.

Solomon Butcher: Pioneer Photographer
Current – March 29, 2015
When one hears the name Solomon Butcher, the images of early Nebraska settlers by sod houses comes to mind, however, that was only part of his career. Butcher later had a studio just three blocks south of what is now the Museum of Nebraska Art in Kearney, Nebraska, and he photographed many Buffalo County residents and towns. Sponsored by Oldfather Financial Services.
